Imagine you are new to the company. Fill out this story to capture nuances that make your culture unique.

I'm so ________________ to join_________________. This morning I walked into the ______________ and the first thing I saw was ______________. Everyone says it's classic _______________ because _______________. My ________________ has been showing me the ropes. She says the people who get ahead here are ________________, ________________, and ________________, but watch out for the ________________ people - they're career trouble. She said you can tell a real ________________ by the way they run a meeting. Those ________________ meetings are run like a ________________, but if you really want to succeed here, remember ________________.

Yesterday I got lost trying to find the bathroom. Embarrassing! The ________________ walked by and _________________. When ________________ happened, I thought it was a little strange, but people tell me it's' very typical here. At ______ we all _________________. You know you're at a ________________ gathering when _________________. I think if I stay here it will be because of the ________________ but if I would go it's ________________. I hope it works out! It's like the guy I sit next to me said: the first rule is ________________, but if you really want to ________________.